A LIST OF SURGEONS AND SURGEON'S MATES IN THE UNITED STATES NAVY APPOINTED PRIOR TO 1816

By CAPTAIN LOUIS H. RODDIS, Medical Corps, USN

Previously the writer published a partial list of naval surgeons and surgeon's mates of the American Revolution. Following the close of the American War of Independence, the Continental Navy disappeared. There was no Navy Department and the War Department administered the maritime affairs of the new republic. In 1794, however, six frigates--four of 44 guns and two of 36 guns--were authorized by Congress in an "Act to provide a Naval Armament" Provision for personnel for these ships included a surgeon and two surgeon's mates for the larger ships, and a surgeon and one surgeon's mate for the 36 gun frigates. The pay of surgeons was set at $50.00 and a surgeon's mate at $30.00 a month. The surgeon received two rations daily, the surgeon's mate one. The surgeon commuted or else sold one ration.

The Naval war with France in 1798 and 1799, the difficulties and hostilities with the Barbary States; and the generally unsettled state of affairs brought about by the Napoleonic Wars, led to the creation of the Navy Department and to a considerable increase in the size of the newly formed Navy. In addition to the original six frigates, three others were added and a number of sloops of war and the schooner "Enterprise." Six lines of battleships of not less than 74 guns were authorized as well as six 18 gun sloops of war but only the latter were built. By the end of the naval war with France, however, the Navy consisted of about 700 officers and over 6,000 men. The Marine Corps had about 1,100 officers and men and as naval medical men cared for them as is the case at present, the number of surgeons and surgeon's mates were proportionate to the combined number of seamen and marines.

The list prepared gives all names found in the official rosters of officers, surgeons, chaplains and pursers. The arrangement of names is such as to give the date of appointment and date of separation of the naval service if known. Otherwise the expression "last appearance on record" is used. By listing all appointed before 1812, the names of medical men who served in our regularly constituted navy after the Revolution to that date are given. These were the men who served in the quasi-war with France, the wars against the Barbary powers. The naval surgeon who served in the War of 1812 will form the subject of a later article.

For convenience of reference, the arrangement of names are alphabetical. Reference to Congressional Resolutions indicate the official thanks of Congress and medals given for participation in special naval engagements.
